Clifford, Paul Clifford, wife and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pratt, and Mrs. Elmer Houghton, From Huntington, Mrs. Alta Pratt, Mrs. W. S. Dirlam and family, and Mrs. J. B.

At noon the company moved in irregular groups to the American House where they were granted the exclusive use of the dining room. The hum of voices during the hour passed there indicated that a "feast of reason" was being enjoyed with the excellent dinner served. The after dinner exercises which had been planned for the ceasion were introduced by the singing of the hymn "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and this was sung with such fervor as to give evidence of a fellowship and clanship that exists in this family to an unusual degree.

Maj. A. C. Houghton presided in such a manner as to remove the chilli-Miss Pearl Coats has been spending ness and formality which a program usually possesses. In a few witty remarks he expressed regret that the one whose name appeared first should have been called away on business. and implied that since he was one of the grafted members, modesty forbade his speaking on the subject assigned him, "The Courage and Good Taste of the Annexed Houghtons."

Prof. W. W. Ross gave a graphic description of school life in Spencer more than a quarter century ago. He spoke impressively of the charms of a certain maiden who gave him an invitation to a spelling school, and whose beauty so attracted him that a purpose of annexation took possession of him.

Mr. George Norton expressed his appreciation of the conquering power of the Houghtons and acknowledged the glory of his own conquest.

Mr. E. W. Houghton took the floor leclaring the impossibility of a speech from him. He gracefully paid an additional tribute to the grafted members, with congratulatory remarks upon the Houghton shrewdness in their selection of companions. He then gave a brief account of the burdens borne in the days of pioneer life, closonsistent christian lives.

Mrs. Ross recited a poem expressing genial comradeship for the brother need. Those who know her can adily understand why the poem so pealed to her.

Dr. Houghton in his introduction emed gratified that on this occasion e Houghtons need not blow their on trumpets, as the brothers-in-law id conscientiously attended to that ity. Musicale by Miss May Haskell.

A very pleasing entertainment was tiven last Friday evening at the M. E. burch by Miss May Clark Haskell asisted by Mr. Franz Skogland, and Miss Burr, of Oberlin. Great credit is lue Miss Haskell in selecting so complete a program. Wellington should proud of her musi ians, so longer need she seek foreign aid in this line. It would be difficult indeed to select iny one number on the program as the best, as each selection was rendered in sympathy with the author. All we can sag for these young people is, that a very successful and prosperous future is before them.
